

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5 Contents to be supplied to a user are divided into a core portion and one or more non-core portions, and an encryption process is applied to the core portion which is supplied to the user. Since the significant portion of the contents is used as the core portion, which is encrypted and transmitted, whole the contents can be substantially protected by the encryption process of only the core portion.